ISAIAH 9:6-7; 11:1-4

The people in Judah did not know what to do. Their country was in danger. The people were afraid. It was a hard time for everyone.

Isaiah lived in Jerusalem. He was part of the king's family. He knew about the people and their trouble.

God chose Isaiah to preach to the people and help them know what would happen. Isaiah told the people what God wanted them to know. Isaiah told the people many things about God and what God had planned for His people.

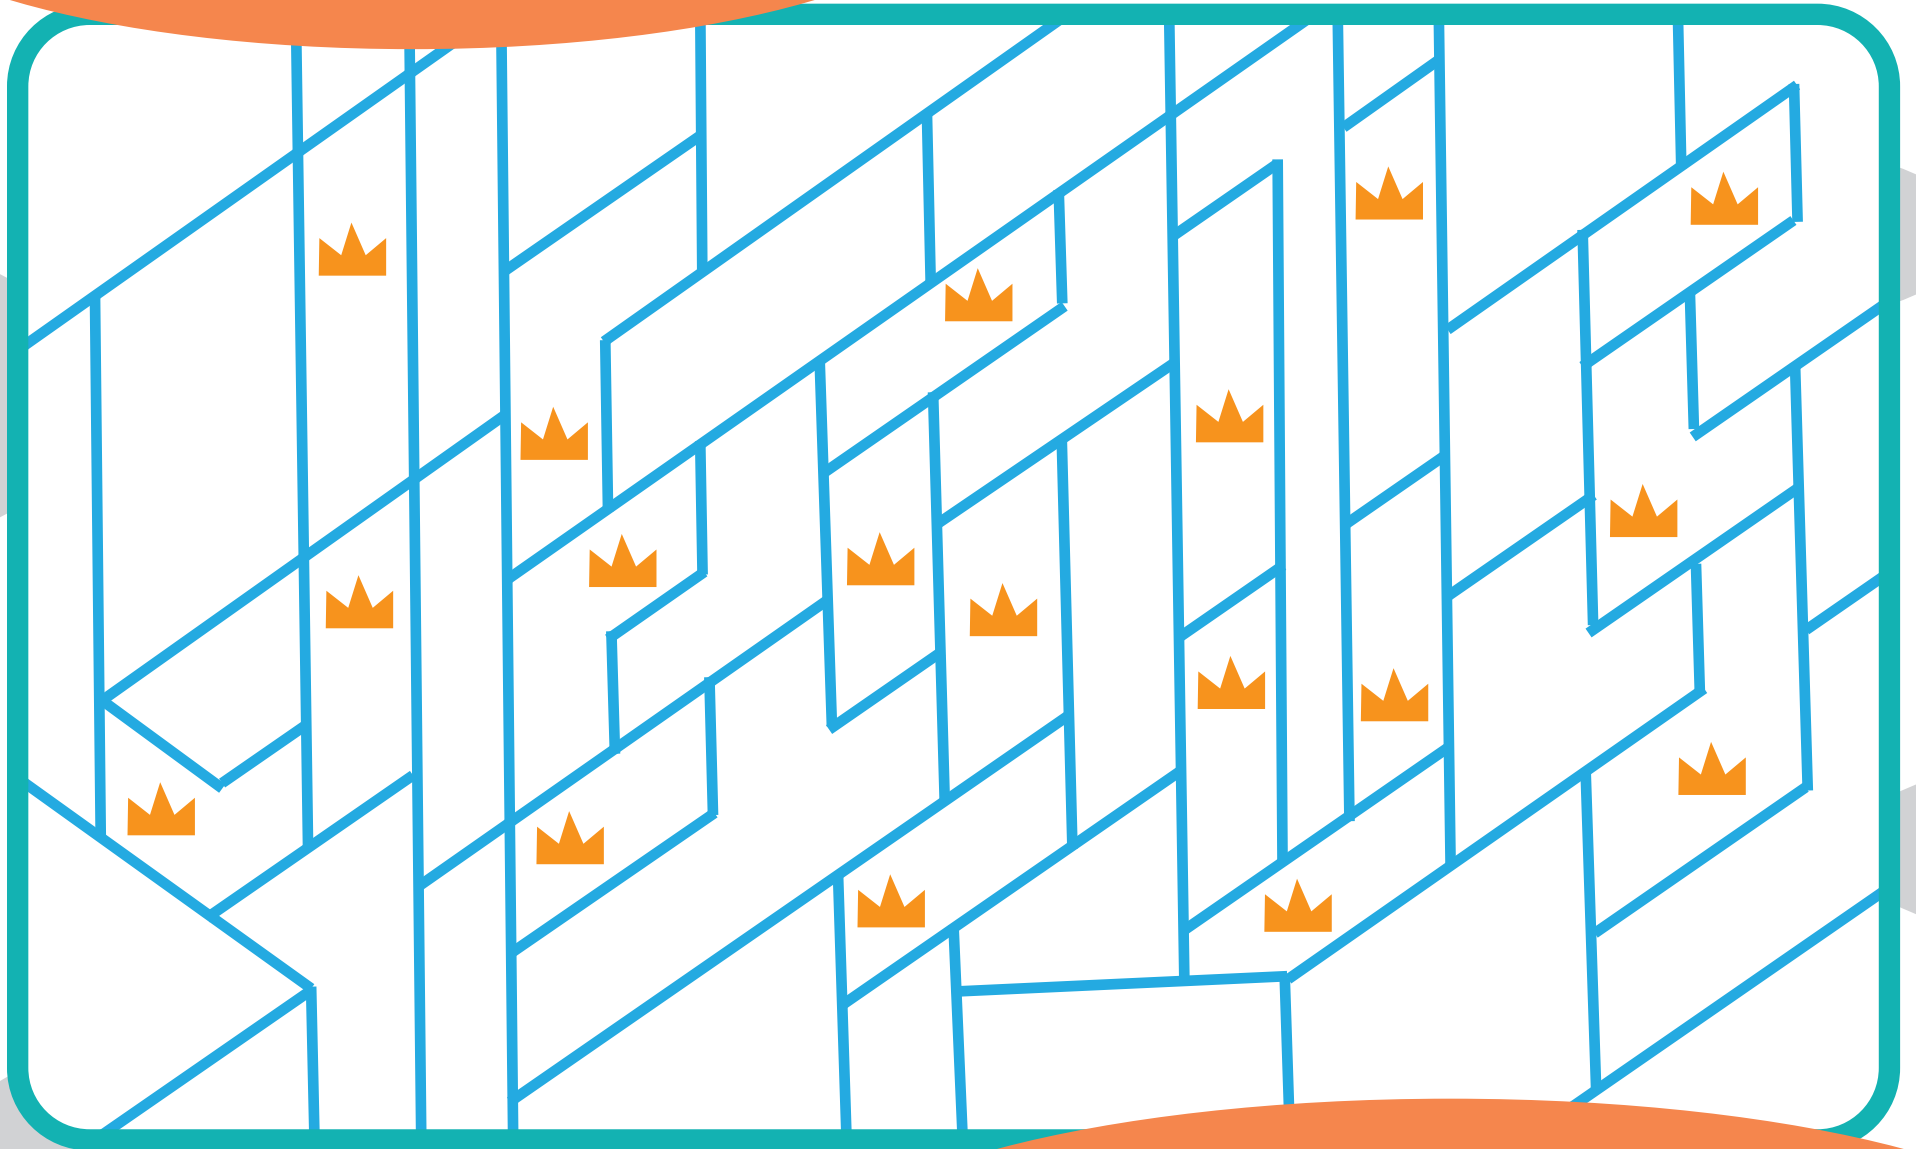

One of the most important things Isaiah told the people was about a man who would come to help the people. Isaiah said, "One day God's Son will be born. He will be wise and understanding. He will be the new King forever. He will love God. This man will make good choices for people. He will teach people what is right."

Isaiah continued to speak about this helper. "Some people will not believe that this person is God's Son. The people will not listen to this man. But God's Son will love everyone. He will help many people know how to love God and others. This man will help people who are sad, sick, and hurt. He will help blind people see."

Isaiah helped people know that God's Son would bring good news and comfort to the poor, sad, and broken-hearted people.
